

THE BIG HARDWARE SALE

Day's Stock at Red Deer

Before talking to you about the Sale, allow us to introduce to the general public of Red Deer and vicinity, the firm of McPherson Bros. There are just two members in the firm, one of them long, lean and lanky—that's Gus McPherson, and the other, fair, fat and forty—that's Jim McPherson. Together they constitute the length and breadth, height and depth of the firm of McPherson Bros. Meet them face to face, you will have no difficulty recognising them as they are abundantly endowed with ginger, both as regards the color of their hair and complexion and their disposition. "But why this introduction?" you ask. We are just coming to that.

McPherson Bros. have bought out the lease and goodwill of the Day Hardware Co. and will carry on the business of this firm in future. In the meantime the store is closed for Stocktaking and getting ready for the Big Sale.

ROCKY MOUNT'N HOUSE

One of the most successful dances held this season was the masquerade staged by the Initiatory Degree Team of the Local I.O.O.F., Tuesday, March 22, 1921, over one hundred couples being present. The fine array of costumes is well worthy of the title. Miss Taylor was awarded first prize for her costume, her costume being one of the English styles as worn in the early Victorian period. Mr. Wm. Ellensburgh was awarded first prize for gents, also wearing an early Victorian costume, representing a country gentleman. Mrs. Braton and Mrs. A. Thompson were also winners of prizes for the costumes which they wore. They were made entirely from newspapers, and were a work of art.

The drill which was put on by the team after the unmasking was exceedingly well done, also. The encore. Credit is due the boys for their work showed great interest in being taken in it.

Two cases of scarlet fever are now reported in town. The schools were closed on Tuesday until after Easter for fumigation, etc.

Oh, what a smile the timber men are wearing these days. The last snow and cold snap has enabled them to get all their cut hauled out to the side tracks. This will no doubt be of great benefit to the contractors, business men and everyone in general.

The funeral of Mrs. A. Verlingue took place at the cemetery on Tuesday afternoon at 2 p.m.

Mr. Coombs, government timber inspector, is in town, having a real busy time checking up the timber men.

THE WEEKLY SERMON

By Rev. G. D. Armstrong

They crucified Him, and two other with Him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.—John 19:18.

Once again, we turn our thoughts to the lonely wind-swept hill of Calvary, with its three lonely crosses and its eternal revelation of human life and divine love.

Surely the hour of suffering was indeed the hour of glory for the Master as in one final act of self-sacrifice and sacrifice, He gave Himself freely for the life of the world.

Many thoughtful people will reverently ask, Why did he die? How does His act avail for us, so far removed from Him in time and place. There are certain misconceptions which should be removed concerning this event.

We should not regard the death of Christ as designed to change the attitude of God toward us. It did not change God's attitude, but it expressed His God toward us. His love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died.

Neither should we think that the death of Christ means exactly the same for us as it did for those whose ideas of life were or are so radically different from our own. People whose ideas of life are tinged with ancient or medieval ways of thinking or theological dogma will find it in something very different from that discovered by those whose ways of thinking are natural and unaffected by dogmatic thinking.

In a new age, many metaphors which once were vital and full meaning lose their significance while new conditions suggest new forms of interpreting the facts of life and expressing its fundamental and eternal truth.

It is quite evident that Jesus pursued a course which most inevitably brought Him into direct conflict with the powers, ecclesiastical and political, who were responsible for His death.

He deliberately sacrificed Himself in harmony with a principle that he saw in nature. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; a principle that is not confined to the natural world but runs through all history and experience."

"There is no gain except by loss; there is no life except through death."

Jesus, accepting this principle as the absolute law of His life, became "obedient unto death," even the painful, shameful death of the Cross. Obedience and love can find no greater or truer expression—"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his enemies."

By this principle the death of Christ relates itself to all men, even to those who may have no knowledge of the human life of Jesus. The drama of Calvary interprets all history. There is no suffering, no sacrifice that has not its counterpart in His experience. The Cross is the interpreter of all mystery and pain. In it we find at work the triumphant energy of God. We may find an illustration of this in the tragic tale of Edith Cavell. Undoubtedly, had this noble woman lived and continued in her profession she would have served and sacrificed with as true a spirit of nobility, of patriotism, of service, in her whole life, as she expressed in her untimely death. But who will deny that by her death she has touched our lives, in a way she could not have done in the ordinary life of a nurse.

So, too, the personality of Jesus is the vital factor in His religion, not any isolated event in His career. Being lifted up, He draws all men unto Himself. The death of Christ has value because it symbolized His life. It has brought him into direct relationship with all the life and problems of mankind.

There is no other solution to our problems—personal, economic, political, international, than the application of His principles to our earthly affairs. In the midst of a world that has missed the glory of God, to those who are repentant, or to those who are unashamed, He stands as the living and the true way.

That was a striking picture that came across the cables the other day. In a Dublin prison six prisoners were being executed. Doubtless in the eyes of the law they were guilty of murder and treason. For the integrity of the Empire it was better that these men should die than that the unity of the nation should be broken up. But as the prison gates are opened, and an armored car emerges, symbolizing the authority of that law, dare we assert, as that car wanders its way through the tens of thousands of women and sympathizers who kneel before hastily constructed altars and repeat their prayers for the rescue of the souls of those whom they regard as martyrs to a great and noble cause, that in our administration of law we are expressing the principles of Jesus? "Our heaven heart still puts its trust in seeking truth and from shame."

As at this Easter season we strive to make real in our lives the central truths of our religion, we may well say—"Judge of the nations, spare us yet; Let us forget, lest we forget."

Mrs. J. M. Craig, of Los Angeles, Calif., who says no one can feel more grateful for what Tangle Hospital has done for her. She has gained twelve pounds and health is better than in years.

hospital district, on the other hand, would have to undertake to bring the hospital thoroughly up-to-date in every particular, with the very latest equipment, X-ray machines and the rest. This is the plan that Mr. Whiston favored and which seemed to meet with the general approval of the meeting.

It is thought that the district will build 3 sub-hospitals, at Rocky Mountain House, Eckville and Delburne, respectively. The proposed Red Deer Hospital District is the second largest in the province.

The Department would not support any plan that failed to make the central hospital as thoroughly up-to-date as possible.

The new hospital at Drumheller is the largest and best that has been built under the municipal hospital scheme. It is a 25-bed plant, and cost, last year, between $97,000 and $98,000. The X-ray machine cost $3,000 and all the hospital is the very latest. This latter statement applies also to every hospital that has been built under the scheme. Drumheller hospital has 4 isolation huts at present.

The municipal hospital would care for all kinds of cases, and that in the event of a general epidemic, when disease got beyond the capacity of the hospital, the responsibility would revert to the municipality under direction of the Provincial Health Officer.

Turbahall, it seemed to him to prevent the tie between the city and the outlying districts for the city to go enthusiastically into the scheme. He thought the citizens held that same opinion and favored the move.

The balance of the evening was devoted to amusements, and there was plenty of good music supplied by a military orchestra.

The entire scope of the banquet, together with the travelling and hotel expenses of all the out-town boys, is taken care of by The Herald Publishing Company, Limited.

Among the carriers who attended from out-town points are the following:

R. Tolton, Taber; Hillyard York, Trochu; Chas. Martin, Howard Marin, Brooks; Cecil Pamblerger, Strathmore; Harold Bailey, Jake Bulmer, Stewart Murdoch, Bassano; Allan Leach, Aerlin, Leach, Drumheller; Martin Fairfield, Barons; Lyle Renard, Okotoks; Walston Mitchell, Nanaimo; Daugh Smythe, Revelstoke; Ted Pilsley, Penhold; Bert Roberts, Canor; Lawrence Mortimer, Drumheller; Billie Mills, Nick Smith, Peralte; Cecil Milley, Coleman; Frank Zboya, Canmore; Lawrence Clenson, Clare; Butlin; Fernon, Price, Youngstown; Robert McCausland, Alma; McCausland, Irene McCausland, Macleod; W. Did you ever go to a boys' banquet? Not a cake and sandwich feed, but a real, honest-to-goodness soup to nuts dinner at which, and still down with 200 healthy, happy boys with appetites like wolves and digestions like ostriches?

BRITISH EDITORS' OPINION

The News has just received a booklet entitled "What British Editors Say About Canada," which has just been issued by the Canadian Department of Immigration and Colonization. It contains brief comments on Canada made by members of the Imperial Press Association who visited this country last summer. The booklet has been issued only for circulation in the Old Country, and readers of this paper may have copies forwarded to any friends in the Old Country who are interested in Canada by sending the names and addresses to the Director of Publicity, Department of Immigration and Colonization, Ottawa. No charge is made for the booklet or for postage on it.

ADVANCE OF AGRICULTURAL INSTRUCTION.

To provide for demonstration and instruction in all lines of agricultural work calculated to benefit the rural population is in brief the main object sought by the Agricultural Instruction Act, under which, starting in 1914, ten million dollars was to be distributed in ten years among the different provinces. The amounts paid to the respective provinces were graded for the first half of the term, after which $1,100,000 was to be divided annually. The work that has been accomplished, and the work that is being done, is comprehensively set forth in the report for 1919-20, recently submitted to the Parliament of the Dominion. Between six and seven per cent, of the funds provided by the Act, or a total of $44,070, is expended by the provinces on what is classed as demonstration and instruction work, including extension work. * Of this amount forty-five per cent, or $256,413, is used in connection with the agricultural instruction system, which now finds its place in each of the nine provinces. When it is stated that, under the Act, a total of $1,890,143 has been devoted to colleges and schools of agriculture in six years, some idea of the benefit that is being conferred on the rising generation in agricultural instruction can be inferred. The Report gives a review of the entire situation, and indicates that, owing in great measure to the encouragement derived from this grant, the progress made in such instruction has been most marked.

ALBERTA'S AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS

By her school of agriculture policy Alberta has taken the lead, if not positively in agricultural education, at least in definite and specific instruction for the young in the province has neglected the subject, but none has gone more directly to its root, and by its creation of six schools of agriculture the province has attracted available attention to itself. By means of these schools nearly a thousand young people have been equipped for their life work. When it is stated that, from funds supplied under the Dominion Agricultural Act alone, a no smaller sum than $200,000 has been employed in the building, equipping and maintenance of such schools, some idea of the benefits derived from the grants under the Act can be obtained. Official reports show that in 1919-20, of the $265,655 which is Alberta's share of $1,100,000 granted annually by the Dominion for division between the provinces, $38,000 was devoted to the Alberta schools of agriculture. In the same years, $9,000 was allotted to instructions in woman's work, and $2,500 to the poultry and egg-marketing service. In the same year there was allotted $10,000 to the agricultural representative system. School fairs, based chiefly on school garden work, and school clubs for the rearing of poultry, calves, colts and pigs, are conducted under the direction of teachers from the schools of agriculture with the assistance of the agricultural representatives and are increasing in number and importance every year. In 1919-20, for instance, 48 school fairs, representing 440 schools and 6,500 pupils, were held, with approximately 25,000 exhibits.

"IMMORTALITY" WAS A SEASONABLE TOPIC AT THE BROTHERHOOD

Logical Presentation By Rev. G. D. Armstrong of This Fundamental Element in Human Progress.

I stand in the living present. I look forward as well as backward. I am immortal. The question of immortality has a universal interest for all mankind, from the savage to the most enlightened philosopher. Science has not obliterated man's sense of immortality. Poets have visualized it, while practical men have endeavored to define it. Some have accepted the theory with childlike simplicity, but the majority of people today are consciously or unconsciously asking, "What is truth?"

In introducing the speaker, chairman R. L. Gaetz referred to the seasonable nature of the topic, it being particularly suitable for the time of year. It is difficult to do justice in an abbreviated report to the subject matter presented by Mr. Armstrong on the occasion. "The question today is not so much 'Can I believe a doctrine?' but 'Is the doctrine true?' Faith will follow naturally when the truth of the theory is established. Credit must not be mistaken for faith. It is the duty of man should have a reason for his faith."

Hope of immortality is almost universal. No leader would be capable of raising a people that have lost faith in the immortality of the soul. Man is worse than more creature of the earth. The mind that can think and picture worlds beyond our own, which makes its home. There is not much force or compelling motive in the materialistic idea today; it is not a normal or natural mood. Man is struggling upward, it is part of his very being to do so. It is not very satisfying to think of life as a vapor, but even vapor may give forth a ray of glory when brought in contact with the sun. Vapor does not pass away completely, otherwise we would in time reach the complete annihilation of all things. The pulpit today does not often attempt to influence mankind by emphasizing the hope of Heaven or the fear of Hell fire.

The old materialistic presentation of Heaven and Hell must pass, although we must admit that it had elements of value. "I myself am Heavily and Hell," says one. Heaven is not celestial environment as much as a state of character. Spiritualism, as presented by Sir Oliver Lodge, for instance, is keenly antagonized by certain religious elements. But why not accept the scientific demonstration of Sir Oliver Lodge as readily as we accept the Christian era? Spiritualism, however, is exceedingly more convincing in imagination. It is absurd that present surroundings should be maintained with a ray of glory, but it is becoming to flatter deny the facts of science.

Where can the line be drawn between spirit and matter? Some day we will recognize the fact that there is no absolute distinction—flesh help soul and soul helps flesh. They are manifestly of the same reality. If nothing in the universe is destroyed, as scientists follow, then we have a right to postulate the immortality of the soul. Abraham said, "Shall not the Judge of all the world do right? Yet crimes go unpunished, the innocent suffer, and justice is not enforced. The world must be destroyed, and the principle of justice is vindicated. We see men cut off in the prime of their splendid youth, but energy and ability pass. Our reason says, no, it is conserved, somehow, somewhere. The very principle of affection leads us to crave for fellowship beyond the bounds of the present life. The early Hebrews had very little idea of immortality. When Moses led his way out toward a materialistic life, flowing with milk and honey. These people in their slavery had little time for contemplation to discuss future existence.

Eljah led by personal character influenced his audience. When he recognized that a good man had died, and they somehow looked for his reappearance. It was in the time of his captivity that the Hebrew people made the greatest progress in the development of their ideas. They came in contact with the east and its train of thought. The result was the evolution of many of these ideas still survive. With some of these people, at least, the idea of the resurrection from the dead was firmly established long before Jesus came. The Hebrew thought was similar to the Japanese idea of today. The Jap feels that the nation has a soul, and that he personally achieves it. The mortality of his heroism for the nation. The Hebrew zeal was for the Kingdom of Israel rather than his personal resurrection. But many did believe, not merely the disciples, but perhaps most of the Pharisees. Thus Stephen's argument appealed to them.

Herbert Spencer claims that life is correspondence with environment. Perfect life, then, could only be found in perfect environment. The world is not an endless monotonous existence, waiting streets of gold and the like; it is infinite satisfaction. How can a man live truly, not how long but how well. Doubtless the soul is immortal.

DISCUSSION

It was stated that the address was the most logical reasoning of any that had been given to the Brotherhood. R. G. D. Armstrong thought that too much emphasis was being placed even on rewards and punishments. The wages of sin is death in reality, he thought, but to know God was eternal life; it was difficult however to know the unknown. Life eternal did not necessarily mean to live forever.

Mr. Armstrong said it was difficult to mark the line between the natural and the supernatural. The experience of Jesus may become our own. As he was, we are to become. Salvation is the working out of that power that always was in the world. "Before Abraham was, I am," the eternal past as well as the eternal future. God is not the unknowable; he is revealed in the New Testament.

In reply to the chairman's comment that it was difficult for some to think of God as abstract, Mr. Armstrong stated that virtue expresses itself constantly in nature and experience.

It was pointed out that sometimes problems solve themselves with time. Sometimes they get greater as time goes on. We touch each other on the surface of our lives. The question is not so much to know God as to know ourselves.

Magistrate Lawrence thought that perhaps the best of the individual never himself, the less likely he was to see it removed for the principle of the thing. The cost of shipping live cattle is so great, especially when 100 pounds of live weight will only produce about 55 or 60 pounds of beef. Moreover the British feeders would have to import a good share of his feed, as well as the cattle, if feeding there became a general practice.

WHAT THE U. F. A. IS DOING

Steps are being taken for an immediate canvass of the entire membership with a view to getting started, making marketing arrangements in England and probably an initial plant at the seashore until proper care can be secured.

Mr. Suprell interviewed the Provincial government on this week, and found the members favorable, in fact, they recognized the necessity, on a par with the many other building grain elevators a few years ago. A co-operative company of producers have to have to get their cattle at lines, with government aid and supervision.

Discussion brought out some additional facts: American meat brought the highest price of any on the British market last year, and the quality and cost of transportation.

The highest price for carcasses weighing 640 to 720 pounds each, which can be brought to maturity as two year olds in a dairy market such as this.

Packers are not necessarily interested, for they cater to the home market and can make as much on a depressed market as on any other kind.

Chilled meat is kept at a temperature of from 29 to 30 degrees, which does not break down the cells in the case of frozen meat.

WHY NOT SOONER?

The question as to why action has been so long deferred was attributed to the speaker to the fact that the reciprocity agreement and subsequent legislation had taken our minds off the subject. We have been waiting Chicago for us (because they had the facilities) what we now propose to do.

L. M. Gaetz, President, occupied the chair. A hearty vote of thanks to the speaker was passed on motion of D. W. McKinnon and G. W. Smith.

raisers on the rack. The results are reflected in the unemployment returns. Canada must get its meat supply direct to the British consumers. We cannot depend on even the good will of a friendly neighbor to do our marketing for us, while he is done this long enough. The United States is naturally more interested in finding an outlet for her own products.

THE BRITISH MARKET

In 1920 Britain imported 44% of its total consumption of meat. This amount was practically 50% of the whole total exports of meat. Of the $10,415 tons purchased by Britain, Canada supplied only 8,676 tons, less than 1%. This in spite of the fact that British prices were constantly rising while ours were going down.

We advertise ourselves as having the greatest cattle country in the world, and yet we are practically the only country without provision for chilled meat industry. New Zealand with only a million people has nearly 15 million dollars invested in chilling and cold storage plants so that she can now hold 8 million carcasses of mutton at one time. Australia has capacity of 6600 cattle, 60,000 sheep and 70,000 lambs per day, with a carcass capacity of over 100,000 tons of meat. South Africa is in the game with 20 establishments, though the quality of their cattle is rough.

Argentina Republic has a capacity to kill and chill 11,000 head of cattle, plus 35,000 head of sheep. Uruguay can handle 100,000 tons per day. Brazil and Patagonia are also in line and the United States has been shipping for around 30 years.

Although nearer the market than the others, we are years behind our rivals.

THE EMBARGO

Some prominent cattle men, for instance, Hon. A. J. McLean and McKnight, Calgary, claim that the removal of the embargo would not help much. However, everyone who looks at the thing, The cost of shipping live cattle is so great, especially when 100 pounds of live weight will only produce about 55 or 60 pounds of beef. Moreover the British feeders would have to import a good share of his feed, as well as the cattle, if feeding there became a general practice.

VIOLATION OF TREATY IS CHARGED

Germany Refuses to Pay 1,000,000,000 Gold Marks Due Allies Today.

Paris, March 23.—Germany in her reply to the recent ultimatum of the allied reparations commission, refuses to pay one billion marks due on this date and disputes the commission's figures showing a balance of 12,000,000,000 marks due on May 1. It is maintained in the German note that the 20,000,000,000 marks which the peace treaty provided should be handed over by May 1 has been more than paid.

The note adds that a joint commission of experts fix the value of the German deliveries on reparations account, but declares that in any event it would be impossible for Germany to pay 12,000,000,000 marks by the first of May.

TEXT OF NOTE
The note concludes as follows: "If, after the experts have conferred, it is estimated that there is a deficit in the payments by Germany, she is ready to begin negotiations with the reparations commission regarding the floating of a loan abroad."

The reparations commission met today to consider the German reply which was transmitted from Berlin last night.

It is contended here that to pay the reparations would be a violation of the treaty of Versailles which the commission will report on at a later date. The allies will then determine what measures shall be taken.

It is contended here that the German experts already have been heard by the commission, which listened to their arguments before fixating the value of the German deliveries credited as payments against the 20,000,000,000 marks. This valuation, therefore, was considered final, since the treaty gives the commission sole jurisdiction in the matter.

ANSWER IS INDIRECT
The reply does not answer directly the commission's demand for a first payment of 1,000,000,000 marks today. This point, however, is covered on the face of things by Germany's contention of overpayment of the entire amount due by May 1.

There is nothing said in this note, nevertheless, to show that it would be impossible for Germany to pay this 1,000,000,000 marks, which the reparations commission knows that Germany has available in the form of assets as well as foreign securities. It is stated.

ARGENTINE EXCHANGE

Winnipeg Tribune.
No great prominence as news was given to the fact that last week the British pound sterling was at a premium of two per cent. in exchange with the Argentine Republic. A premium of two per cent. is only a normal variation on the part of exchange. It itself means little or nothing.

It is emphasized the fact that exchange between the two countries has returned to an entirely normal basis.

The remarkable fact is that the Argentine Republic was one of the beneficiaries of the war while Great Britain was the heaviest sufferer financially. The Argentine, it is true, suffered to a certain extent from the scarcity of shipping, but this was nothing compared with the stimulus which the war market gave to its production.

It is evident that since the war Great Britain must have been selling large quantities of goods to the Argentine when she is already able to purchase there with the pound sterling without any discrimination. The Argentine is a great producer of what Great Britain requires, and Great Britain will find it advantageous to buy there because her money will go further. In a word commerce between the two has resumed its normal character of direct barter.

Our commerce with Great Britain has never had the characteristics of direct barter. We have always sold to Great Britain and bought from the United States, leaving Great Britain's debt to us to discharge our debt to the United States.

What country was deriving the greatest benefit from such a traffic is not a conundrum requiring a great deal of ingenuity to solve.

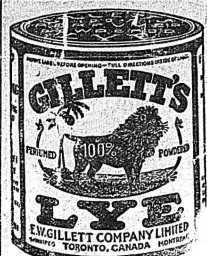

The tendency of United States policy is to exclude our products, which is bound to place us in rather an unfortunate position if the habits of our trade compel us to continue to buy almost exclusively in that market.

SYLVAN LAKE WILL BE RENDEZVOUS FOR ALBERTA

At a recent meeting of the Edmonton Boys' work board, Rev. H. McEwen was elected chairman. The officers elected were: Vice-chairman, A. L. Marks; Secretary-Treasurer, A. M. Dallas; executive members, A. A. Adams and Rev. J. A. McEwen.

One of the drastic steps taken by the board was the appointing of a special committee to secure a large number of boys for the camp at Sylvan Lake, to be held in the latter part of June. The local Y.M.C.A. boys' camp at Sylvan Lake will be the site of the camp, and it was also discussed.

The latter part of April were also discussed.

FORDNEY BILL COMING AGAIN, SAYS HARDING

New President Instructs His Following to Rush Measure Through.

Washington, March 21.—The Fordney emergency bill, previously vetoed by former President Wilson, may be rushed through special congress as the first important legislation of the first session. According to the request of President Harding for passage of a measure designed to help the farmers, asking protection against foreign competition, Republican members of the house ways and means committee turned about today and voted to revive the Fordney bill after agreeing almost unanimously a week ago not to consider any emergency legislation ahead of a permanent tariff and revenue revision.

Senator Penrose, Smoot and McCumber, conferees from the senate finance committee, agreed to the new program, which, it was explained, meets the approval of the president. Senator Penrose expressed the belief that the emergency measure would be in the hands of Mr. Harding within ten days after the convening of the special session, April 1.

After disposing of the emergency measure in the first few days of the extra session, the house will take up and pass the anti-dumping bill which will be followed by the allied measure fixing a United States valuation on goods which must pay ad valorem duty. Then will come the permanent tariff, which Republicans hope will be broad enough to satisfy all interests in all sections demanding an upward revision. The actual work of framing it will begin tomorrow.

IMMENSE CAMP AT FORT NORMAN OIL FIELDS

Fairbanks, March 23.—Daniel Cadzow, factor of Rampart House, one of the northernmost posts of the Hudson's Bay Company, returned from his trip to the Fort Norman oil fields, declared an immense camp is being formed in the Fort Norman oil fields, and others awaiting the opening of spring traffic.

The Fort Norman field, Cadzow said, is 300 miles long and 200 miles wide, along the McKenzie river, the oil bearing area embracing 600 square miles. One well, sunk by the Imperial Oil Company, gushed 1000 barrels an hour at 600 feet, according to Cadzow's information, and arrangements are being made to pipe the oil to the nearest navigable stream. The Canadian government has two airships for communication with the oil fields.

COAL MINED IN 1920 REACHED CASH VALUE OF $30,330,172

During the month of November of last year, 803,745 tons of coal were produced in the mines of Alberta, showing that with the present labor, equipment, development, and plant, the province is capable of producing over 8,000,000 tons a year, or two million more than was produced in 1920, which in turn was the banner year for this province.

Last year the control of the mines branch was transferred from the department of public works to the provincial secretary under Hon. J. A. Cote, and the annual report of the branch was presented to the legislature by Mr. Cote for the first time. The amount of coal mined in 1920 was valued at $30,330,172, a decided increase over four years before, when the official estimate of the value was $11,858,577. The value of the natural gas mined was valued at $1,183,490, compared with $1,113,296 in 1919. There was $75,285 worth of petroleum and for the clay products the estimated value was $21,430 compared with $225,416 in 1919. Under the title "other products," the increase is from $67,142 in 1919 to $1,491,217 in 1920. There was a little copper ore mined but this was not a serious effort, 18 men being reported as working for 68 days.

EXAMINER'S REVIEW OF PROVINCIAL MARKETS

Calgary, Friday, March 25.
Owing to tomorrow being a holiday. The Market Examiner appears a day ahead of time this week, the quotations being given up to Thursday. Calgary yards will be open tomorrow for the week-end business, but Easter Monday will be a holiday.

Cattle
Some very well finished steers on Calgary market this week advanced the tops, on the good cattle the market is 25c higher, with choice steers $8.00 to $8.50 and some topers $8.50 to $9.00, but these latter do not make a general market; good butcher steers $6.75 to $7.75; medium, $6.00 to $6.75; common, $5.00 to $6.00. Cows not as good quality: choice, $5.75 to $6.25; a few higher, but scarce; good but slightly better, going up to $5.00. Calves scarce, with choice from $9 down. Feeder steers, $6.00 to $6.75; stockers, $4.75 to $5.75. Stocker heifers, $4.50 to $5.00; cows, $3.00 to $5.00.

There is a good market on choice fat stock at Edmonton and top prices quoted $7.25 to $8.25; with good butcher steers $6.00 to $6.50; medium, $5.00 to $5.50; common, $4.00 to $4.50. Choice cows and heifers also higher, top, $5.25 to $6.25; good butchers, $4.50 to $5.00; medium, $3.75 to $4.50; common and canners, $2.00 to $3.50. Cows of choice quality sold up to $7.00 but this was for something fancy. Receipts light and demand on prime beef active. Stocker and steers unchanged, ranging from $6.25 down according to quality.

Hogs
Added strength shown at Calgary market and Wednesday's sales up to $14.75 to $15.00. Thursday's sales at $15.25.

Another advance in hog prices in Edmonton, with the Wednesday sales at $14.75, an advance of half a dollar over last report.

Sheep
Prices on killing sheep holding steady at Calgary; lambs from $11.00 down; wethers, $8.50 down; ewes, $7.50 down.

Choice lambs would bring $11.00 at Edmonton, wethers around $10.00, and ewes at varying prices from $8.00 down.

Grain
Last week-end saw a very bad break in all grains, with wheat on Saturday at $1.84, terminal basis, and other grains badly reduced. Slight recoveries since recorded, and the tone of the market better, with milling demand fairly active, and some export buying on the breaks in prices.

Produce
Eggs this week touched the lowest point in years, and with quotations Thursday $6.00 to $6.50, it looks like a break to the lower figure all round; heavy production and low outside markets responsible. Cream prices likely to decline any day about 5c, but not announced yet. Creamery butter, with best around 40c. Potatoes quiet, country shippers asking $2.50, but few sales. Potatoes, $2.50 to $3.00; chickens, $3.50 to $4.00; fowl and chicken; dealers quote live birds 10c to 25c. Cheese advanced, twins $4.00, and singles $3.50.

Present quotation on eggs at Edmonton is $6.00, with a free movement of eggs in Edmonton market showing pleasing increase, and for the present prices at stations is still higher. Creamery butter will bring 55c for the best, but not for the grades. Creamery butter with increasing creamer receipts indications are that lower butter and cream prices will come fairly soon, but cream prices are present are selling out promptly owing to scarcity of stored butter. Cheese in good demand. Poultry receipts in Edmonton very light, and storage stocks showing seasonable activity.

Hay
Slight demand, but not sufficient to warrant any change in prices; country dealers offering hay at $12 to $15; timothy $17 to $20.

Wool
Selling in the east very slow during past week.

Hides
No market outlet developing; prices unchanged at 2 1/2c to 4c.

Furs
Coats showing loss of quality; market slow, but dealers hope for better manufacturing demand later.

REFLECTOR OF SCOTTISH GORY

All Scotsmen take pride in their native land, but none more than an old gardener of Saddington, Edinburgh, of whom an American Contemporary tells the following story:

The gardener was showing to a tourist the beauties of the loch and of the little village. It was evening and as he expatiated on the lovely scene and on the glories of his country, the moon rose over a hill. The old man stopped short in the middle of a speech, (and gazed at the moon in admiration.)

After a moment he turned to the tourist, and said, "There's a moon far yer! I tell ye, mon, we're a grand nation!"

NEW CITIZENS FOR CANADA

"With a population of less than two persons to the square mile compared to England's six hundred, with only five per cent. of her rich agricultural land in the West under cultivation, with a heavy national indebtedness and only a few people to pay the interest in the form of taxes, the reason why Canada is hungry for immigrants can readily be understood. Immigration is the human rain without which Canada must parch and wither up."

If Great Britain had a large surplus of farmers and farm hands, Canada might not have to invite immigrants from any other source. But Great Britain is not so much an agricultural as a merchant and manufacturing centre, and every year draws excellent sections of its farmers or farm hands who leave her Colonies for the Dominions. She is quite willing to send out countries city folk in the hope that they may be transformed into farmers in their new environment, but she has fewer farmers to spare than many other countries from which Canada in the past has drawn excellent sections. This is illustrated by the homesteaded entries. From 1897 to 1910, only eighteen per cent. of the British immigrants made entry for homesteads in Western Canada as compared to twenty-seven per cent. of the American immigrants and twenty-nine per cent. of the foreign born from Continental Europe.

In certain parts of Europe where there is a genuine land hunger, there is not enough land to go round. Five or six acres per family is all the land available in certain parts of Belgium, and even on that the thrifty Belgian frequently brings up a family of ten. The great immigration of Ukrainians from Central Europe which has given Canada nearly 500,000 of her Western farm population was due to the constant subdivision of farms which were only fifteen acres to start with. These Ukrainians have become a great asset to Canada, and have at their own expense erected four large colleges for higher education. Then again we owe our fine stock of seventy thousand Scandinavian settlers to the lack of sufficient land in Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Iceland.

These foreign born made good Canadian citizens? Read "The Education of the New Canadian," by Dr. J. T. Anderson, of Saskatchewan, and you will say "Yes!" In one or two groups at first there was opposition to the learning of English, particularly among the older folk, which has characterized the history of the Mother Country. The Flemish weavers and the Hugenots in Canada are to be found in the West, and a few of the foreign born immigrants who helped to build up British industry, Canada's chief industry is agriculture, and her agricultural prosperity is due in no small degree to the thrifty and industrious new Canadians who have come to the wide acres of the West from the over-crowded lands of Europe, and whose children to-day are proud to speak English and to sing "The Maple Leaf for Ever."—A.B.

THE FORTUNATE MARY

By Eleanor H. Porter

Twenty years of her married life, and half as many more of her widowhood, Mary Mahoney had spent in the little brown house.

Mary was of the type called "motherly." She "ran" the house, and "watched" with the sick. She borrowed on occasion, and lent freely. She was the center of the new-born and closed the eyes of the dead.

Mary's sons and daughters had died years ago. In the little brown house with her were a widowed cousin, Mrs. Mary Ware, and a bachelor nephew, John Tibbets, both of whom worked in stores a few blocks away; they paid her for their board and rooms.

With herself and her work Mary Mahoney was more than content. "There ain't nuthin' better I'd ask to do than what I am doin'," she would declare, contentedly, as she sat in the chair and looked at the photographs, which she kept in a box under the bed.

"I'd like to see you, Tibbets, when you talk and sing to me. 'Twould be as good as a picture to me, and I'd like to see you, Tibbets, when you talk and sing to me."

And it was to this house and to this woman that there had come now the announcement of a legacy of forty thousand dollars.

When the lawyer called on her, Mary Mahoney fell back in her chair and fanned herself as if the month were August instead of March.

"Sakes alive, Mary Dittie! Won't you think of that, now! Forty thousand dollars—and to me!"

Mary Ware had been christened Dittie long before by the family to distinguish her from her cousin; and each time Mary Tibbets before marriage.

"Not that I can guess what I'll be worth of all that money," resumed Mary Mahoney, with a frown, "still, 'twould be a good thing to have that money."

The other's countenance relaxed in a deprecating smile. "Why, no, I don't think so," she admitted. "But you see I thought of a photograph 'cause that's all I really need."

"Really needing? If your whole starved life weren't just crying out for things!"

A painful red-brown to Mary's face. "Why, Mary Dittie, you know I ain't starved a bit. I'm sure—don't you have—have enough to eat—have it?"

Mary Dittie laughed, and threw at her hands desperately. "Of course I do! You don't understand. It's your life, your soul, not your body that's starved. Now you can go to places and see things. You can see the world. You'll have time, now you see. And you can have nice things, now you can look at and live with."

Thibbets broke with longing. "Shol' now, so I will," murmured Mrs. Mahoney. "I hadn't thought of it that way." She paused and rapped soberly at the store's ringing out the window. Suddenly her face lighted up. "Say, Mary!" she exclaimed. "I'm goin' to get that photograph right away. As long as I live now that the money is comin', it don't matter if I spend some of mine that in the stockin' does it?"

"No, of course not," agreed Mary Dittie brightly; but she sighed a little as she rose to her feet and prepared to return to her work for the afternoon.

There was not much excitement for the time talked of in the brown house—the wonderful fortune that the almost forgotten Uncle Simon had left Mary Mahoney. Seeing how very dear this fortune was in the eyes of her friends and neighbors, she herself gradually began to regard it with more interest. The lawyer had said that there were a few preliminary articles, concerning other bequests and so forth, to be arranged before the estate could be settled; then she would be asked to come and get her inheritance. Meanwhile he should be glad to let her see as soon as possible for her new thousand dollars.

As to the lawyer's check, Mary Mahoney was not at all enjoying the situation immensely. She liked to see a new difference paid to her; and she never tired of talking about the bequest, the man who made it, and the strange news of it all. With the "sacred money," she had indulged in various "extraneous" as she called them, she had bought pens, paper, and ink, and white napkins, and a string of green beads for her neck, and a blue dress; she had treated Mary Dittie to several trolley-ride, and to three or four motion pictures above.

The check, which Mary had not yet received, she had bought at once.

When the check came, Mary eyed it doubtfully. She was not used to it. "You don't mean that it's there on that paper, a whole thousand dollars?" she demanded of her cousin.

"No, no," said Mary Ware. "It means that the money is in the bank waiting for you; don't you remember? The lawyer told you—and all you've got to do is to present this and you'll get it. This is a check. Father used to have lots of them, and he told me when I was eighteen he would put some money in the bank for me to have for my own. And then he died; and that ended—everything!"

"Yes, I know. Poor father!" Mary Mahoney, in quick sympathy, "and it's been hard for you—harder it's been for me—to work, as you've had to. I—I wish this money had come to you instead of me, now. I wish I did! I didn't want to look like a girl, and I've never been a girl as a girl, and I'm sure I didn't like him—father."

"I'll give it to you, myself," argued the other. "Surely you'd take it from me!"

"No, no," said Mary Ware. "It means that the money is in the bank waiting for you; don't you remember? The lawyer told you—and all you've got to do is to present this and you'll get it. This is a check. Father used to have lots of them, and he told me when I was eighteen he would put some money in the bank for me to have for my own. And then he died; and that ended—everything!"

"I'll give it to you, myself," argued the other. "Surely you'd take it from me!"

"No, no," said Mary Ware. "It means that the money is in the bank waiting for you; don't you remember? The lawyer told you—and all you've got to do is to present this and you'll get it. This is a check. Father used to have lots of them, and he told me when I was eighteen he would put some money in the bank for me to have for my own. And then he died; and that ended—everything!"

"Yes, I know. Poor father!" Mary Mahoney, in quick sympathy, "and it's been hard for you—harder it's been for me—to work, as you've had to. I—I wish this money had come to you instead of me, now. I wish I did! I didn't want to look like a girl, and I've never been a girl as a girl, and I'm sure I didn't like him—father."

THE FORTUNATE MARY

By Eleanor H. Porter

Twenty years of her married life, and half as many more of her widowhood, Mary Mahoney had spent in the little brown house.

Mary was of the type called "motherly." She "ran" the house, and "watched" with the sick. She borrowed on occasion, and lent freely. She was the center of the new-born and closed the eyes of the dead.

Mary's sons and daughters had died years ago. In the little brown house with her were a widowed cousin, Mrs. Mary Ware, and a bachelor nephew, John Tibbets, both of whom worked in stores a few blocks away; they paid her for their board and rooms.

With herself and her work Mary Mahoney was more than content. "There ain't nuthin' better I'd ask to do than what I am doin'," she would declare, contentedly, as she sat in the chair and looked at the photographs, which she kept in a box under the bed.

"I'd like to see you, Tibbets, when you talk and sing to me. 'Twould be as good as a picture to me, and I'd like to see you, Tibbets, when you talk and sing to me."

And it was to this house and to this woman that there had come now the announcement of a legacy of forty thousand dollars.

When the lawyer called on her, Mary Mahoney fell back in her chair and fanned herself as if the month were August instead of March.

"Sakes alive, Mary Dittie! Won't you think of that, now! Forty thousand dollars—and to me!"

Mary Ware had been christened Dittie long before by the family to distinguish her from her cousin; and each time Mary Tibbets before marriage.

"Not that I can guess what I'll be worth of all that money," resumed Mary Mahoney, with a frown, "still, 'twould be a good thing to have that money."

The other's countenance relaxed in a deprecating smile. "Why, no, I don't think so," she admitted. "But you see I thought of a photograph 'cause that's all I really need."

"Really needing? If your whole starved life weren't just crying out for things!"

A painful red-brown to Mary's face. "Why, Mary Dittie, you know I ain't starved a bit. I'm sure—don't you have—have enough to eat—have it?"

Mary Dittie laughed, and threw at her hands desperately. "Of course I do! You don't understand. It's your life, your soul, not your body that's starved. Now you can go to places and see things. You can see the world. You'll have time, now you see. And you can have nice things, now you can look at and live with."

Thibbets broke with longing. "Shol' now, so I will," murmured Mrs. Mahoney. "I hadn't thought of it that way." She paused and rapped soberly at the store's ringing out the window. Suddenly her face lighted up. "Say, Mary!" she exclaimed. "I'm goin' to get that photograph right away. As long as I live now that the money is comin', it don't matter if I spend some of mine that in the stockin' does it?"

"No, of course not," agreed Mary Dittie brightly; but she sighed a little as she rose to her feet and prepared to return to her work for the afternoon.

There was not much excitement for the time talked of in the brown house—the wonderful fortune that the almost forgotten Uncle Simon had left Mary Mahoney. Seeing how very dear this fortune was in the eyes of her friends and neighbors, she herself gradually began to regard it with more interest. The lawyer had said that there were a few preliminary articles, concerning other bequests and so forth, to be arranged before the estate could be settled; then she would be asked to come and get her inheritance. Meanwhile he should be glad to let her see as soon as possible for her new thousand dollars.

As to the lawyer's check, Mary Mahoney was not at all enjoying the situation immensely. She liked to see a new difference paid to her; and she never tired of talking about the bequest, the man who made it, and the strange news of it all. With the "sacred money," she had indulged in various "extraneous" as she called them, she had bought pens, paper, and ink, and white napkins, and a string of green beads for her neck, and a blue dress; she had treated Mary Dittie to several trolley-ride, and to three or four motion pictures above.

The check, which Mary had not yet received, she had bought at once.

When the check came, Mary eyed it doubtfully. She was not used to it. "You don't mean that it's there on that paper, a whole thousand dollars?" she demanded of her cousin.

"No, no," said Mary Ware. "It means that the money is in the bank waiting for you; don't you remember? The lawyer told you—and all you've got to do is to present this and you'll get it. This is a check. Father used to have lots of them, and he told me when I was eighteen he would put some money in the bank for me to have for my own. And then he died; and that ended—everything!"

ECKVILLE U.F.A.

Entertainment and Dance at Kusamo Hall

The entertainment and dance held under the auspices of the Eckville U.F.A. at Kusamo hall last Friday was a most successful affair, although the weather turned to almost a blizzard with the thermometer fairly low and the snow flying all around. The big hall was filled to capacity. We sold at the door 128 tickets, and counting all the children under 12 years of age who were admitted free of charge. It is a safe guess to place the whole attendance at about 165 persons.

The programme was of the very best with songs and speeches in both the Finnish and English languages. Mr. Gust Maki made a fine speech, pointing out strongly the aims and objects of the Farmers movement, saying that as we organized on an economic ground we all can join, as it does not matter what a person's belief is in politics or religion. In this organization our interests are absolutely identical, and therefore he urged all agricultural people, regardless of sex or race, to line up for the betterment of themselves. Great applause followed his speech. The three-act show entitled "The Suppressor of Liberties" was put through with vim and vigor, the climax coming when the rich millowner, through his intrigues against the workers in the mill, was humiliated and escorted out of the hall. This play has to be seen to be appreciated. The other two acts of the same name as was played in the Eckville hall a week ago, and of which we gave a review. The dance started after the plays and the other parties of the programme were over and was enjoyed by all who took part. At a little after 8 a.m. we all departed in the storm to find each others place of abode.

At this stage, I cannot help but say a few words about this splendid hall owned by the Finnish people, living in the district surrounding the same. It has many times been said that this hall is the best west of Red Deer (even if Red Deer comes up to the same) and is splendidly adapted for shows of all kinds, as there is a good spacious stage and the best hardwood floor for dancing. The decorating and painting is harmonious and done with good taste. Mr. Matt Harju, the caretaker, is a good manager, everything runs just like clockwork, and in addition to the main hall there also is a kitchen on the side where any person can obtain the best of lunch for a very reasonable figure. In short, this is a splendid hall and one of which the many shareholders can be justly proud.

A rumor was brought to the attention of the writer at the entertainment to the effect that we were going to divide the receipts from our doing—half to a religious organization. I will just take this opportunity to point out that the preceding of the above rumor did not in the least hurt our cause, and the primary object of these getting-together socials is not a money-making scheme (which everyone knows by the size of the admission charged), but by mingling together we not only learn to know each other, but by contact our views take a broader look at things which we encounter in our every-day life. And if we get a surplus after our expenses are all paid, well and good—this will be a useful addition to our local funds in the rebuilding of our local organization. And I might add that if any deficit should occur, the same fund has got to stand for it and put up the balance. If we are I hope, in the future decide to again put on entertainments and whatever might be the result for the object as above stated; and if by any chance it should be for any other worthy cause, the same will be clearly set forth. Our determination is and will always be not to sink under a false flag, and we are very grateful for the splendid support which we have received from all sides. Our next and last of this series of entertainments and dances will, as you all know, be held in the Estonian hall on April 1, and farmers and non-farmers are equally welcome.

J. E. LUNDENBERG,

March 21, 1921.

SHADY NOOK

Mr. Chas. Gurney is blossoming forth as a new Caruso.

Mrs. P. Crawford left Wednesday for her new home at Halkirk.

Mr. A. McCune, who has been very ill, is able to be around again.

McCune brothers have been disposing of quite an amount of seed wheat lately.

Mr. Whiteside, Poplar Ridge, is erecting a residence on the S.E. quarter of 32-37-28. He held a "bee" one day last week when some neighbors lent a hand. Mr. Whiteside's family will move as soon as their house is completed.

The concert and dance on Friday night was well attended and was a splendid success. Besides a big crowd from the district, there were number from Poplar Ridge, Hildgewood, Crossroads, etc. Considering the short time for practice, the performers did exceptionally well. Mr. and Mrs. Dwyer and Mr. A. McClaine supplied splendid music and dancing was continued till a late hour.

CONCERT FOR MEMORIAL FUND

The people of Red Deer and district will have a rare musical treat on Tuesday, April 12, at the Methodist church when Lary A. Simons will sing a concert programme. Miss Daisy Gaetz acting as accompanist, and Mrs. McDowell contributing two violin numbers. The form of the programme is unique in Red Deer, in that the whole of the ten vocal numbers will be sung by Mrs. Simons. This arrangement gives room for variety and plan in the selection of the vocal numbers, and gives the artist a wider opportunity to display the quality and range of her beautiful voice. Mrs. Simons has sung occasionally in Red Deer, but only in one or two numbers and this concert programme will give her many friends and the music-loving public an opportunity to hear her at her best. Among the numbers will be the "Swiss Song" from Faust, two Italian numbers, and some of the choicest of the old and the modern songs. Miss Daisy Gaetz and Mrs. McDowell, the supporting artists, have also given a great deal of time and attention to their part of the work. Miss Gaetz especially, and the programme is bound to give great satisfaction and delight to all who attend. The event will be one of the most pleasing character, and Red Deer people will look forward to it with much expectancy. The proceeds will go to the War Memorial Fund.
